We will consider flexible working applications
Teaching Fellow in Global Development
School of Politics and International Studies, Faculty of Social Sciences

Are you qualified to teach on Gender, Global Development and Development Practice? Do you have a PhD in Gender, Global Development or a related discipline? Are you passionate about delivering an exceptional student experience?

You will have the ability to deliver research-led teaching and expertise in global development. We are particularly looking for the ability to teach on the MA level modules Gender, Globalisation and Development; and Research and Project Skills-Experiential Learning, as well as the level 2 Development Theory and Practice module. In addition there will be some contributions to other team-taught modules, and there may be some input to third level BA/MA dissertation supervision.

You will have a first degree and a relevant postgraduate qualification or PhD in Gender and Global Development and Development Practice or a relevant allied discipline (this includes work submitted for assessment, but not yet examined) and an ability to contribute to the effective delivery of relevant and appropriate teaching at undergraduate and postgraduate levels.

This role is available to one individual on a full-time basis (37.5 hours) or to two individuals on a part-time basis. Applicants wishing to apply for the role on a part time basis should make clear in their application how many hours they are seeking to work.

What does the role entail?

As a Teaching Fellow your main duties will include:
- Teaching at different levels as appropriate to the post;
- Being involved in the assessment of course work and examinations;
- Contributing to the review of modules and programmes and quality assurance mechanisms;
- Undertaking a full time teaching load (as measured against the school norm) and taking part in other teaching activities, as appropriate;
• Contributing to the support and guidance of students, resolving issues and/or referring to specialist parties, where appropriate;
• Contributing to school and faculty policy and practice in teaching;
• Contributing to the development of innovative approaches to learning and teaching;
• Carrying out appropriate administrative responsibilities and contributing to the administrative process and the committee structures of the school, and as appropriate of the faculty and wider university;
• Exercising initiative within assigned tasks and execute tasks within a timely manner;
• Effectively organising own work, prioritising as appropriate.

These duties provide a framework for the role and should not be regarded as a definitive list. Other reasonable duties may be required consistent with the grade of the post.

What will you bring to the role?

As a Teaching Fellow you will have:
• A first degree and a relevant postgraduate qualification and a PhD in Gender and Global Development and Development Practice or a relevant allied discipline (this includes work submitted for assessment, but not yet examined);
• An ability to effectively deliver relevant and appropriate teaching at undergraduate and postgraduate levels, including the ability to lead and teach on the Gender, Globalisation and Development; Research and Project Skills-Experiential Learning; Development Theory and Practice modules and other areas of the Global Development programme at BA and MA level;
• A commitment to research led teaching;
• A high level of interpersonal and communication skills, including writing skills and the ability to communicate effectively to an academic audience and other stakeholders as appropriate;
• A capacity to enthuse others, work successfully as a member of a team and demonstrate an awareness of the benefits of collaborative working;
• Good IT skills;
• An ability to work effectively, responsibly and independently, and to work under pressure;
• Good organisational ability, including the ability to manage time effectively and prioritise tasks.

You may also have:
• Excellence in relevant and appropriate teaching, as evidenced for example in student feedback obtained from teaching or peer review;
• Experience of developing classroom teaching materials at undergraduate and postgraduate level;
• Experience of contributing to the review of modules and/or programmes;
• An appreciation of the policy and strategic issues currently affecting teaching in higher education.
• Experience as a practitioner in an International Development organisation
