Salary: Grade 7 (£33,199 – £39,609 p.a. pro rata)

Reference: AHCEN1030

Closing date: 16 August 2019

Part time, 65% of full time

Fixed term from 2 September 2019 until 31 August 2020

Teaching Fellow in Eighteenth-Century and Romantic Literature, School of English, Faculty of Arts, Humanities and Cultures

Do you have proven skills as a teacher of English Literature? Do you have the ability to motivate and inspire learners? Do you have a clear commitment to creating and delivering an excellent student experience?

As a Teaching Fellow you will design and deliver lectures and seminars for our Level Two core modules Eighteenth-Century Literature and Literature of the Romantic Period. In the second semester you will also convene the specialist module Romantic Lyric Poetry. You will join an intellectual community whose diverse interests span the full range of the discipline from medieval and early modern literature to the medical, digital and environmental humanities.

What does the role entail?

As a Teaching Fellow your main duties will include:

- Teaching: designing and delivering group teaching to provide a stimulating, supportive and relevant learning environment for students; preparing high quality learning resources including effective use of technology to enhance learning; writing and presenting academically rigorous and intellectually challenging lectures, which support the learning objectives of the module; taking personal responsibility for the design and style of teaching delivered and taking on board any feedback as well as being proactive in seeking it out;
- Assessment and Feedback: preparing students for assessment tasks by appropriate guidance; grading work once submitted and providing timely, constructive feedback in accordance with and with reference to published marking criteria;
- Evaluation: facilitating the process of gaining feedback from students and evaluating module teaching in the light of experience, students' achievement and feedback;
- Administration: maintaining an accurate record of student's attendance; ensuring accurate record-keeping in relation to assessments; completing any administrative tasks associated with module delivery by the required deadlines.

These duties provide a framework for the role and should not be regarded as a definitive list. Other reasonable duties may be required consistent with the grade of the post.

What will you bring to the role?

As a Teaching Fellow you will have:

- A first degree and PhD (or close to completion) in English Literature or a closely allied discipline;
- A strong background in the field of eighteenth-century literature and/or Romantic literature;
- Demonstrated experience of teaching in a University environment, and the ability to interact with students in ways that will enhance the student experience;
- Good time management and planning skills, with the ability to meet tight deadlines and work effectively under pressure;
- Excellent written and verbal communication skills including presentation skills and the ability to communicate effectively with a wide range of stakeholders;
- Proven ability to manage competing demands effectively, responsibly and without close support;
- A proven ability to work well both individually and in a team.

You may also have:

- A teaching qualification.
