Teaching Fellow in Creative Writing
School of English, Faculty of Arts, Humanities and Cultures

Are you a published writer (preferably of fiction, life-writing or plays) with proven skills as a teacher of creative writing? Do you have the ability to motivate and inspire learners? Do you have a clear commitment to creating and delivering an excellent student experience?

You will teach a minimum of one undergraduate option or core module in creative writing and will undertake appropriate administrative and examining responsibilities associated with the teaching of our Creative Writing programme. You will also assist with the School’s teaching e.g. seminars, workshops and tutorials, as well as its series of readings and events, in order to contribute more generally to its development of creative writing. You will be expected to engage with the School’s culture of interdisciplinary research and research-led teaching.

The School of English has played a historic role in supporting and stimulating new literary voices from around the world. In 1996, to maintain our rich and diverse traditions of literary creativity, we instituted a Creative Writing Fellowship for the purpose of teaching creative writing to undergraduates within our honours degree programme. This post is a new iteration of that fellowship.

You will join a team which includes Poet Laureate Simon Armitage as Professor of Poetry; Professor of Romantic Literature and poet John Whale; Zaffer Kunial as Douglas Caster Cultural Fellow (a position previously held by Helen Mort, Malika Booker and Vahni Capildeo), writer and academic Dr Kimberly Campanello (who is also the Programme Leader) and Leverhulme Fellows and poets Rachel Bower and Karl O’Hanlon. A new undergraduate BA (Hons) in English Literature with Creative Writing began in 2018-19 and a Masters in Creative Writing and Critical Life was launched in 2017. The School also offers practice-led PhDs in Creative Writing and performance-based theatre studies.

The Leeds University Poetry Centre (LUPC) is based in the School and regularly welcomes guest readings from established and emerging poets. The School is home to two internationally-respected journals which feature creative writing: Stand magazine (poems and short stories) and Moving Worlds (poems, short stories and critical articles) as well as Poetry & Audience and a new annual anthology of students' writing called Tenter Hook. The Poetry Centre is also a focus of research and impact activity.

What does the role entail?

As a Teaching Fellow, your main duties will include:

- Teaching: designing and delivering group teaching to provide a stimulating, supportive and relevant learning environment for students; preparing high quality learning resources including effective use of technology to enhance learning; writing and presenting academically rigorous and intellectually challenging lectures which support the learning objectives of the module taking personal responsibility for the design, delivery and style of teaching delivered and taking on board any feedback as well as being proactive in seeking it out;
- Assessment and Feedback: preparing students for assessment tasks by appropriate guidance; grading work once submitted and providing timely, constructive feedback in accordance with, and with reference to, published marking criteria;
- Evaluation: facilitating the process of gaining feedback from students and evaluating module teaching in the light of experience, students’ achievement and feedback;
- Administration: maintaining an accurate record of student’s attendance; ensuring accurate record-keeping in relation to assessments; completing any administrative tasks associated with module delivery by the required deadlines.

These duties provide a framework for the role and should not be regarded as a definitive list. Other reasonable duties may be required consistent with the grade of the post.

What will you bring to the role?

As a Teaching Fellow, you will have:

- A record of publishing in the field of creative writing (preferably prose and/or drama);
- Demonstrated experience of teaching in a University environment, and the ability to interact with students in ways that will enhance the student experience;
• Good time management and planning skills, with the ability to meet tight deadlines and work effectively under pressure;
• Excellent written and verbal communication skills including presentation skills and the ability to communicate effectively with a wide range of stakeholders;
• Proven ability to manage competing demands effectively, responsibly and without close support;
• A proven ability to work well both individually and in a team.

You may also have:
• A teaching qualification;
• A postgraduate qualification in Creative Writing or a related field.
